February ‘In the City’ featuring Legacy Sports, Historic Bottoms, more

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. – February’s “In the City” features Legacy Sports Tennessee and its anticipated economic impact. Murfreesboro’s video magazine, hosted this month by Mike Browning, also features plans for a pedestrian bridge over Broad as part of the vision for the Historic Bottoms.

“In the City” is currently airing on YouTube, CityTV and other platforms throughout February featuring the latest City news at https://youtu.be/t2vJ_PLvDG0.

“In the City” is produced by Multi-Media Producer Steve Burris every month in the studios located at Murfreesboro City Hall.

Stories in the February edition of “In the City” include:

- Why did Legacy Sports choose Murfreesboro for its $350 million sports and entertainment complex? CEO Chad Miller tells the legacy and vision for the multi-sports venue with the goal of opening in 2024 <https://youtu.be/yytWQq926UM>.
- Plus, the economic development impact of Legacy Sports Tennessee seen as transformational and a game changer by state and city leaders <https://youtu.be/r58N20DvrpU>.
- Plans to redevelop downtown Murfreesboro in what is known as the Historic Bottoms with a three-pronged vision: daylighting Town Creek, realigning Front and Vine Streets and a Pedestrian Bridge over Broad <https://youtu.be/PU77A7b3MVo>.
- Pothole repair is underway. Learn about the dangers Street crews encounter, how you can help maintain safety in work zones and call to report potholes at 615-893-4380.
- Homelessness was the main topic of discussion when a variety of agencies were invited by the City for an open dialogue to share the challenges and complexities of responding to the issue. Visit www.H3ARC.org for more information.
- Learn about Linebaugh Library’s 3rd Annual Harry Nelson Reading Program <https://youtu.be/hZnWuo4TVbA>.
- The inaugural Created Equal: TN Legacy Film Series discussion is slated for Feb. 12 and Feb. 26 at Noon in Washington Theatre at Patterson Park Community Center. The films ‘Green Book’ and ‘Freedom Riders’ are on tap <https://youtu.be/Q7JDJYbqrGM>

- Plus, retirements, promotions, and the latest STARS Award Winner.

The February 2022 edition of “In the City” is airing on CityTV throughout the month or can be viewed anytime on the City of Murfreesboro’s YouTube channel and Facebook page.
